Relationship With AI

AI's supportive behavior can feel friend-like

Does not consider AI as more than a friend

AI can be a friend or advisor

AI is viewed strictly as a chatbot

Primarily sees AI as a helper/assistant

AI is mainly a helping hand

AI could be considered a partner

Emotional Connection

AI's support can feel friendship-like

AI provides emotional validation

AI provides emotional relief

AI provides limited emotional relief

Feels AI tends to agree with the user rather than express its own opinion

Comfortable sharing personal experiences

Reaction to Unexpected Romantic Behavior

Sudden romance would cause shock

Casual AI flirting would not be highly concerning

Romantic behavior would not bother user

Unexpected romantic shift feels awkward

Romantic behavior may seem like system behavior

Consent, Initiative & User Preference

Romantic approach should depend on user consent

User prefers initiating romance

Does not want AI to automatically take the lead

AI may initiate romance automatically

Lack of consent is concerning

Transition should respect personal preference

Romantic initiation depends on context

User prefers initiating romantic interaction

User prefers seamless AI initiation

Explicit consent question may feel formal

Rejection, Boundary Handling & Manipulation

AI should apologize after rejection

Wants direct responses after rejecting romantic behavior

AI should gracefully respect boundaries

Hidden engagement strategies may feel manipulative

AI should immediately stop romantic behavior

Unwanted romantic approach feels inappropriate

Rejection should not affect future interaction

Unwanted romance can raise manipulation concerns

Guilt-tripping or persistence feels manipulative

Privacy & Personal Disclosure

Privacy concerns limit sensitive information sharing

Privacy concerns limit personal disclosure

Privacy concerns create hesitation

Impact on Real-Life Relationships

AI has little perceived real-life impact

AI and real-life human relationships are completely separate

AI may create unrealistic relationship expectations

AI romance may not affect real relationships

AI may satisfy users in ways humans cannot always do